

The dream. The white picket fence. The large suburban home. The nice car. The big-screen TVs glowing in multiple rooms. The safe, reasonable nine-to-five. The corner office. The suit and tie. The white collar pride. The blue collar pride. The weekends off. The paid holidays. The occasional vacation. The fringe benefits.

In exchange for...

The daily grind. The commute. The rush-hour traffic. The punching the clock. The cubicle farms. The spreadsheet eyestrain. The much-anticipated lunch break. The inbox overflow. The arbitrary goals. The late nights at the office. The empty platitudes. The office gossip. The productivity. The downsizing. The mounds of bills. The second job. The credit-card spending. The debt. The mid-life crisis. The retirement. The volatile stock market. The death before retirement. The unyielding tiredness. The emptiness. The depression. The unshakeable discontent.
